I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of the Islamic Republic of Iran stated that since the third cycle review, significant measures had been taken to develop rural and nomadic areas, to mitigate the impacts of climate change and to support refugees and migrants.
6. The Islamic Republic of Iran had remained committed to advancing human rights education across all sectors. Human rights topics had been incorporated into educational programmes, and over 800 human rights and citizens' rights training courses had been conducted for judges and law enforcement and prison staff.
7. The Islamic Republic of Iran had submitted its periodic reports on the implementation of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and had concluded a framework of technical cooperation with OHCHR.
8. The Islamic Republic of Iran had made substantial intellectual, human and financial investments to improve people's lives, including the complete elimination of the gender gap in primary and secondary education, national health network coverage of 93 per cent for rural areas and 98 per cent for urban areas, and increased access to safe drinking water. Under the law supporting sustainable development and employment creation in rural areas,

8,400 production units had been revitalized. In terms of skills enhancement, over 2 million individuals had received training, with 51 per cent of programmes delivered for women and girls. The country had also provided targeted cash and non-cash subsidies to people in vulnerable situations to mitigate the impacts of unilateral sanctions.

9. The Islamic Republic of Iran stated that the general framework of the draft bill to prevent harm to women had been approved. It also noted that 145 political parties had been operating in the country, along with 14,000 labour and employer organizations and 57 associations related to religious minorities. The country had been hosting up to 8 million refugees and undocumented migrants, providing free education to over 700,000 Afghan students.

10. The Islamic Republic of Iran underscored that the most severe regime of unilateral sanctions had persisted during the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) pandemic, while referring to the violation by the United States of America of the order issued by the International Court of Justice on humanitarian exemptions. It also emphasized that unilateral coercive measures and secondary sanctions had been gravely violating the rights of the Iranian people, especially their right to life and well-being.

13. In response to the questions raised during the interactive dialogue, the Islamic Republic of Iran stated that it had put in place significant normative developments over the past four years, in particular, an executive regulation on prison organization and the implementation of security and correctional measures in line with the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (the Nelson Mandela Rules). It also noted the issuance of the Judicial Transformation and Excellence Document, which was aimed at addressing challenges within the judiciary, such as delays in proceedings.

14. The Islamic Republic of Iran also stressed that in line with its obligations under the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, guidelines had been adopted to support persons with disabilities and older persons in the judicial process. Judicial support offices for children and women offered free judicial services, particularly in underdeveloped areas. Regular and unexpected inspections of prisons and detention centres were also conducted.

15. The Islamic Republic of Iran stated that regarding women's rights, efforts had been made to increase the representation of women in universities and in the fields of science, technology, engineering, and information and communications technology. Women's life expectancy had increased, whereas maternal mortality had declined.

16. In the field of employment, efforts had been made to allocate a significant percentage of jobs and licences to women, to train rural and nomadic women through an entrepreneurship promotion plan and to create a guarantee fund for women heads of household.

17. Progress had also been made in facilitating the appointment of women to key government and management positions based on merit: the number of appointments had doubled since 2020, reaching more than 40,000 in 2023.

18. The Islamic Republic of Iran further emphasized that the right to active, universal and non-discriminatory participation in regulating the country's policies had been ensured through the creation of a free and inclusive electoral system. The country had held six rounds of elections since the third cycle universal periodic review and had approved the Comprehensive Election Law to clarify and guarantee the rights of voters and candidates.

19. The Islamic Republic of Iran further emphasized that efforts had been made to provide an appropriate environment for parties and associations by issuing licences and permits for trade organizations and non-governmental organizations. The right to peaceful assembly and public participation were recognized by the Constitution and laws. Protests and gatherings were held spontaneously in a self-motivated manner while security was ensured.

20. The Islamic Republic of Iran underscored that Sunnis had equal rights to participate in political, social and administrative affairs. Moreover, a significant number of Sunnis were employed in executive bodies. In the recent election, 22 representatives of the Sunni community had entered Parliament.

21. The Islamic Republic of Iran emphasized that while hosting millions of refugees, it had been providing them with support that went beyond the provisions of the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, of 1951. Free education, health services and vocational training had been provided and an electronic employment system had been launched.

22. The Islamic Republic of Iran stated that in some cases, positive discrimination had been applied to address the specific needs of religious minorities. The Ministry of Culture and Islamic Guidance was mandated to support cultural, artistic, media and religious activities of minorities. Violence and hate speech against Iranian ethnicities and religions were criminalized. The funds provided to religious minority associations had amounted to US$2.5 million between 2020 and 2024.

23. The Islamic Republic of Iran also stated that regarding employment, the religious minority community had been active in investment projects in various sectors, such as refineries, food and meat processing plants and international transportation.

24. The Islamic Republic of Iran stated that it had enacted several important laws, such as the Law on the Protection of Children and Adolescents, the Transparency Act for the three branches of government and executive agencies, the National Disaster Insurance Fund Act and the Facilitation of Business Act.

25. The Islamic Republic of Iran also noted that the Article 90 Commission under Parliament was responsible for addressing any complaints or objections from individuals or groups against the Government.

26. The Islamic Republic of Iran further noted that recently the Non-Governmental Organizations Parliamentary Caucus and the Parliamentary Caucus for Supporting the Rights of Persons with Disabilities had been formed. All specialized committees of Parliament had also ensured compliance with the country's international human rights obligations under the human rights treaties, to which it was a party.

27. The Islamic Republic of Iran emphasized that the Supreme Council of Adolescents and Youth, the Laws on the Protection of Orphaned and Neglected Children and the Law on the Protection of the Family formed the basis for the realization of children's rights. A free health treatment plan for children under the age of 7 had been implemented and 34 specialized hospitals for mothers and children had been established.

28. The Islamic Republic of Iran stated that measures had been taken to prevent school dropout, such as criminalizing the prevention of education, including for immigrants and refugees, and introducing distance education. Counselling centres and centres for special learning problems had also been set up for students with special needs.

29. The Islamic Republic of Iran also stated that national guidelines for the decriminalization of juvenile offences had been prepared along with a counselling system in juvenile courts. Additionally, workshops on the juvenile justice system had been introduced to train judges, lawyers, law enforcement officers and social workers.

30. The Islamic Republic of Iran further stated that a new law criminalizing the economic exploitation of people under 18 had been introduced. Any form of physical violence or corporal punishment was prohibited in schools. Early marriage was contrary to the general policies of the country. If marriage before the legal age occurred, it was due to the fact that such early marriage was associated with local traditions and cultures.

31. The Islamic Republic of Iran stated that the Press Law explicitly provided that no government or non-government authority had the right to exert pressure on the press or engage in any form of control or censorship. Measures had also been taken to facilitate access to information and create a conducive environment for media activities by reforming the licence issuance procedure, establishing advanced communication infrastructure in rural areas and expanding multilingual content production. Additionally, measures had been taken to ensure that media professionals faced fewer administrative and judicial obstacles.

32. In concluding, the Islamic Republic of Iran stressed that it viewed the recent appointment of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran as a politically motivated measure. It stressed that the reports of the Special Rapporteur had failed to reveal the reality of the human rights situation of the country, as they were based on inaccurate information and biased perspectives. Nevertheless, the Islamic Republic of Iran had been engaging consistently with the Special Rapporteur through in-person meetings and correspondence.

33. The Islamic Republic of Iran emphasized that with the establishment of the national committee to investigate the 2022 unrest, the extension of the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission was regarded as a political act, notably given the inaction of international human rights mechanisms regarding crimes against humanity and war crimes committed by Israel.

34. The Islamic Republic of Iran also stressed that capital punishment had been used in accordance with international regulations and was limited to the most serious crimes, such as intentional murder, acts of terrorism and drug trafficking. However, with amendments to anti-narcotics laws, the issuance of death sentences had been reduced. Concerning the practice of retribution in kind, the Islamic Republic of Iran had been encouraging reconciliation. To that end, it had established a National Council for Patience, Peace and Forgiveness. Capital punishment for minors was not observed in practice.

35. Regarding accession to treaties, the Islamic Republic of Iran had been considering the provisions of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and had remained in contact with OHCHR. The Islamic Republic of Iran also underscored that arbitrary detention was prohibited by law.

36. The Islamic Republic of Iran regretted that human rights had continued to suffer from instrumentalization and double standards. Without overcoming such challenges, there would be no meaningful contribution to the promotion of human rights.

37. The Islamic Republic of Iran emphasized that its commitment to human rights was rooted in Islamic teachings and the Constitution. It also stressed that those who had demonstrated inaction regarding Israeli atrocities in Gaza had been far from credible models of human rights.
