I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The head of the delegation informed the Human Rights Council that the national report had been prepared inclusively, involving government institutions, the Human Rights Ombudsman and civil society. The national Interministerial Commission on Human Rights monitored implementation of recommendations, with a voluntary midterm report submitted in 2022. Slovenia had fully or partially implemented 180 of the 182 recommendations from the previous cycle.

6. The human rights framework remained strong, with the Ombudsman and the Advocate of the Principle of Equality as independent institutions. The Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman had been accredited with A-status under the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles) in 2021. Slovenia had strengthened efforts to combat hate speech, establishing the Strategic Council for the Prevention of Hate Speech in 2023 and amending the Criminal Code to introduce a provision on hate crime. Public awareness campaigns and the upcoming amendments to the Media Act had further reinforced those efforts.

7. The Long-Term Care Act adopted in 2023 had enhanced access to care. Housing reforms was aimed at increasing affordable public rental units. A homelessness prevention strategy was set for adoption in early 2025. Gender equality advanced with nearly 40 per cent of parliament composed of women. Measures had been included in the National Programme for Equal Opportunities for Women and Men, while the National Programme for the Prevention of Domestic Violence and Violence against Women had introduced targeted protections. In 2021, the Criminal Code had been amended to include an affirmative consent model in defining rape.

8. Slovenia had promoted disability inclusion, amending the Constitution in 2021 to recognize Slovenian Sign Language and tactile sign language for deafblind persons. In 2023, disenfranchisement of persons under guardianship due to intellectual or psychosocial disabilities had been abolished. Child protection had been reinforced with the opening of the first Children's House (Barnahus) in 2022. The Government continued supporting the Italian and Hungarian national communities and the Roma population through targeted education, social inclusion and improvements to living conditions.

9. Migration policy had progressed with an Integration Strategy in 2023 and a new Immigration Strategy in 2024. Legislation had been amended to safeguard migrant rights, and accommodation expanded for asylum-seekers. Permanent centres for unaccompanied minors with professional support teams had been opened in 2024. On "erased persons" (persons from the former Yugoslavia who had been removed from the country's Register of Permanent Residents in 1992 following the independence of Slovenia in 1991), the Constitutional Court had upheld compensation legislation in 2024 and pending cases continued to be resolved.

10. Slovenia maintained one of the lowest rates of unimplemented judgments of the European Court of Human Rights due to a well-coordinated approach. In 2021, it had ratified the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance. A strategy to combat antisemitism had been adopted in 2023.

11. On international commitments, Slovenia was in the process of ratifying the International Labour Organization Violence and Harassment Convention, 2019 (No. 190), while the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights was under review. While the International Labour Organization Domestic Workers Convention, 2011 (No. 189), was not planned for ratification, domestic workers had equal rights under national law. In January 2024, the Government had submitted a draft law to ratify the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.

Two temporary measures had been activated in October 2024. A new prison in Ljubljana, due to be finalized in 2025, was expected to ease overcrowding and provide inclusive facilities. Alternative sanctions, including weekend jail, house arrest and community service, had also been promoted.
47. Slovenia emphasized that hate speech and hate crime harmed individuals and society. In 2023, the Criminal Code had been amended to make bias motivation an obligatory aggravating circumstance in sentencing. In the prosecution policy of 2024, the State Prosecutor General had prioritized hate speech-related offences, which were also a key focus of the National Programme of Crime Prevention and Suppression. The Strategic Council for the Prevention of Hate Speech, established in 2023, collaborated with non-governmental organizations, experts and State bodies.
48. Since 2019, victims' rights had been reinforced, ensuring access to information and individualized assessments. Training for professionals covered gender-based violence, child protection, and domestic abuse.
49. Amendments to the Human Rights Ombudsman Act, drafted in 2023, aimed to expand its mandate to monitor State actions against trafficking in persons and oversee public services. The proposal included establishing a child rights ombudsman, who might also be granted the power to monitor implementation of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. The new ombudsman was expected to take office in 2025. The budget of the Human Rights Ombudsman had steadily increased and was submitted directly to the National Assembly following a ruling in 2020 by the Constitutional Court.
50. Slovenia prioritized gender equality. The National Programme for Equal Opportunities for Women and Men addressed gender mainstreaming, intersectionality and discrimination. 51. Amendments introduced in 2023 required publicly listed companies to ensure at least 40 per cent gender representation on supervisory boards by 2026. Efforts to combat domestic and gender-based violence included expanding crisis accommodation and shelters, with placements increasing by 10.5 per cent since 2019. The Love Does (Not) Hurt campaign, launched in 2023, raised awareness through public figures and social media. The Criminal Code was being amended to allow ex officio prosecution of marital rape and sexual violence.
52. Slovenia reaffirmed its commitment to disability rights. The Action Programme for Persons with Disabilities addressed diverse needs, and a research project on violence against women with disabilities aimed to improve data collection. Accessibility regulations required all public buildings to be fully accessible by 2025, and a national information centre had been established in 2024. Deinstitutionalization efforts continued, relocating residents to community-based housing. Since 2019, individuals with disabilities had a legal right to personal assistance.

53. The Programme for Children covered key areas of child welfare, with more than €500 million having been allocated in 2024. Slovenia had one of the lowest child poverty rates in the European Union, with 9.3 per cent of children at risk of social exclusion. The Child Guarantee National Action Plan ensured equal access to education, healthcare, nutrition and housing for at-risk children.

54. The anti-discrimination framework protected individuals regardless of their sexual orientation or gender identity. Amendments to the Family Code had redefined marriage as a union between two persons, granting same-sex couples equal adoption rights. A national strategy to promote LGBTQ+ rights and eliminate discrimination was in progress.

55. Slovenia remained committed to protecting older persons, given the demographic trends of an ageing population. The Long-Term Care Act had established an accessible public care system focused on individual choice and expanding community-based support. Measures were in place to prevent violence against older persons, including training and research initiatives.

56. Slovenia continued efforts to protect Roma rights. The National Programme of Measures for Roma remained the main policy framework, with combating anti-Gypsyism as a key priority. Awareness campaigns and school-based initiatives addressed discrimination and early or forced marriages. Social inclusion focused on education, employment, healthcare and public services. Roma enrolment in schools had increased, supported by additional staffing and language programmes. The National Programme for Language Policy promoted the Roma language, while employment initiatives improved training and job opportunities.

91. Slovenia had adopted the Strategy for the Development of Health Services in Primary Healthcare until 2031 to ensure an accessible, fair and sustainable healthcare system, supported by the National Mental Health Programme 2018–2028. Universal healthcare was guaranteed through mandatory health insurance. To address waiting times, the Government had expanded medical training and introduced new regulations to improve access to specialist care. Fifteen new outpatient clinics had been opened to strengthen primary care, and measures had been implemented to increase initial medical examinations and reduce waiting times, acknowledging the strain delays placed on patients and the healthcare system.

92. Slovenia had addressed constitutional shortcomings regarding the Mental Health Act, as identified by the Constitutional Court in 2015 and 2019. Amendments adopted in 2023 had clarified admission conditions for secure social welfare institutions, ensuring both security and appropriate therapeutic services. The Government was committed to ongoing monitoring of those regulations and was preparing further amendments to expand community-based services and reduce involuntary treatment.

93. A new immigration strategy had been adopted in 2024, focusing on safe and legal migration, protecting dignity and preventing exploitation and hate speech. A new language course for beginners, introduced in 2024, had enrolled 995 participants, most of whom were women.

94. Slovenia upheld international protection and the principle of non-refoulement. However, it faced a sharp increase in irregular border crossings, with more than 100,000 in 2023 and 2024, 95 per cent of whom had sought asylum. The Ministry of the Interior had issued guidelines to ensure the humane treatment of vulnerable migrants, including families and unaccompanied minors. Overcrowding in 2022 and 2023 had led the Government to expand capacity for housing asylum-seekers and open two new centres in 2024, ensuring access to accommodation, food and basic necessities.

95. Since 2021, asylum-seekers had been allowed to leave reception centres before making formal applications. Detention remained strictly regulated on the basis of individual assessments and subject to legal remedies. Special attention was given to vulnerable individuals, including unaccompanied minors and victims of trafficking. Under the European Union Pact on Migration and Asylum, Slovenia had strengthened its capacity to identify vulnerable individuals, upgraded legal guardianship and enhanced staff training. A legal framework introduced in 2023 provided for the systematic provision of accommodation and 24-hour support for unaccompanied minors, including psychological assistance and education.

96. Slovenia had reinforced efforts to combat trafficking in persons through two-year action plans, awareness campaigns and professional training, with guidelines issued for employers and labour inspectors to prevent forced labour. Specialized police units collaborated with international partners on cross-border investigations, resulting in five convictions in 2024, with further cases ongoing.

97. In 2024, Slovenia had proposed a new media law to protect freedom of expression, improve protections for journalists and combat hate speech. While existing laws banned incitement to violence and hatred, enforcement remained weak due to a lack of sanctions. The new law had extended those prohibitions to digital media, including online influencers, and introduced penalties. Additional measures included State support for quality journalism and media literacy programmes and new rules for government advertising.

98. The Government had also issued guidelines for moderating discussions on public social networks and launched awareness campaigns to tackle online hate speech. In education, protocols for addressing peer violence had been updated to explicitly recognize online abuse. The National Assembly had passed an act on the cultural rights of ethnic communities of the former Yugoslavia, ensuring protections for language, media content and cultural heritage. Dialogue with the German-speaking ethnic group continued.

99. Slovenia remained committed to climate action and environmental protection, with the right to a clean environment enshrined in its Constitution. Significant progress had been made in rehabilitating damaged areas, and a third version of the Environmental Protection Act was being prepared to introduce further improvements.

100. As part of its just transition strategy, Slovenia had committed to phasing out coal by 2033. Recognizing climate change as a global security challenge, it actively participated in international climate discussions. The Government aimed for climate neutrality by 2050 and was exploring ways to accelerate achieving that goal. The first national law on climate was in its final coordination phase (before government approval) and would provide a legal framework for stronger climate action.

101. Slovenia had increased climate financing by 40 per cent in 2023, fulfilling its commitment to double funding for adaptation measures. It pledged a 150 per cent increase in contributions to the Green Climate Fund and supported the establishment of the Fund for Responding to Loss and Damage.

127. Nigeria commended efforts to combat trafficking in persons and protect the rights of migrants.

128. Yemen commended Slovenia for its efforts to promote human rights.

129. Slovenia reaffirmed its constitutional commitment to non-discrimination, ensuring equal rights for all. The Protection against Discrimination Act and other legislation, including Protocol No. 12 to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (European Convention on Human Rights), provided strong safeguards. While there was no single anti-discrimination strategy, measures were integrated into policies on gender equality, antisemitism, disability rights, child protection, migration and Roma inclusion. A national LGBTQ+ equality strategy was being prepared, with efforts focused on promoting tolerance and diversity in education and training for professionals in law enforcement, social services and the media.

130. Slovenia acknowledged a shortage of 15,000 public rental homes and was committed to investing €100 million annually in housing projects until 2035. The Family Code prohibited marriage under 18, with rare exceptions for those aged 15 or older deemed sufficiently mature, requiring court approval based on input from the minor, their intended spouse, parents and social workers. Since April 2019, only four underage marriage cases had been adjudicated.

131. Slovenia was preparing legislation on strategic lawsuits against public participation to protect journalists and human rights defenders. The Government strongly supported Directive (EU) 2024/1069 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 April 2024 on protecting persons who engage in public participation from manifestly unfounded claims or abusive court proceedings (“Strategic lawsuits against public participation”). The draft law being prepared had undergone public consultation in December 2024 and was expected to exceed the scope of the European Union Directive.

132. In early 2025, the Government had adopted a new resolution on preventing corruption and submitted it to the National Assembly for approval. The independent Commission for the Prevention of Corruption issued recommendations, imposed fines for minor offences and reported annually to the National Assembly.

133. Slovenia maintained a well-organized reproductive healthcare system, with low maternal mortality and an adolescent birth rate of 3.5 per cent in 2023. Every woman had access to affordable sexual and reproductive healthcare, and transgender individuals had equal access to health services. The Mental Health Act specified that mental disorders alone were not a valid reason for sterilization or termination of pregnancy. Public healthcare provided family planning services through primary, secondary and tertiary reproductive health teams.

134. On women’s employment, Slovenia had seen steady progress, with the employment rate for women aged 20–64 rising from 72.9 per cent in 2019 to 74.3 per cent in 2023. Unemployment stood at 3.7 per cent, with near gender parity. Amendments to the Employment Relationships Act in 2023 had incorporated Directive (EU) 2019/1158 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 June 2019 on work-life balance for parents and carers, introducing five days of unpaid family caregiving leave and the right to disconnect, ensuring worker protections and gender equality in the labour market.

135. Slovenia had addressed gender reassignment by allowing registration based on a medical attestation. Individuals received a new personal identification number and their birth certificate reflected the new gender without noting the reassignment.

136. Defamation remained a criminal offence but was prosecuted by the victim, in a similar fashion to civil cases. Courts could reduce sentences if the accused apologized or retracted their statements. Penalties for criminal offences against honour and reputation were low, typically three to six months of imprisonment, with higher sentences for severe cases. The Constitutional Court had confirmed that such criminal legislation was compatible with the Constitution and the European Convention on Human Rights.

137. Slovenia continued to introduce reforms to the juvenile justice system. Although a draft bill on juvenile offenders had been prepared in 2019, legislative challenges had delayed its adoption. A comprehensive analysis had been conducted with European Union technical assistance, leading to a new draft bill that had been submitted for public consultation in January 2025. Meanwhile, amendments to the Criminal Procedure Act in 2020 and 2024 had improved protections for minors during criminal proceedings.

138. Slovenia reaffirmed its commitment to human rights at the national and international levels, viewing them as central to sustainable development, peace and stability. Slovenia prioritized gender equality, the rights of women and girls, children and older persons, environmental protection, human rights education and minority rights, which would remain key in its foreign policy.

139. The Government pledged to carefully review recommendations from the review process, engaging ministries, government agencies, national human rights institutions and civil society in the follow-up. The delegation expressed its appreciation to all those delegations that had participated in the review, the secretariat, interpreters and the troika for their contributions.
